6. SELECTION PROCESS

The selection process for foreign candidates applying for the Masters and PhD in Collective Health will be carried out respectively by the Masters and PhD Selection Committees.

The candidate whose application was approved will take part in the selection process, which will include an evaluation of the dissertation or thesis proposal, analysis of the Curriculum Vitae and interview. The availability of supervision for his or her research theme will also be taken into consideration.

The proposal that can be presented in Portuguese, Spanish or English should have a maximum of 15 (fifteen) pages, using Times New Roman font 12, and line spacing of 1.5. It should address a theme related to one of the research areas at the Institute of Collective Health and should include the following sections:

- a) Introduction (description of research question and of its relevance for collective health, taking into consideration the state of the art in that field of knowledge)
- b) Objectives of the investigation
- c) Theoretical references: summary of main concepts, and of relevant notions and terms
- d) Methodology (approach, strategies for data production, target population, viability analysis and potential impact)
- e) Timetable
- f) References.

The dissertation or thesis project will be evaluated by the Selection Committee and will be given a classification ranging from zero to ten, according to the following criteria: coherence, relevance, originality, how updated the literature review is, how adequate the theoretical and methodological approaches are regarding the research question, viability, adequacy regarding the lines of research at the Institute of Collective Health, and attention to ethical issues concerning the research.

The curriculum vitae will be evaluated and ranked, in a scale ranging from zero to ten, according to the following criteria: educational background, professional and academic experience with emphasis on collective health, participation in research projects, insertion in research groups, publications (scientific articles, book, book chapters, conference abstracts). The candidate may be requested to give proof of information included in the curriculum vitae.

The interview will be led by the Selection Committees, according to the period specified in the timetable, and must be related to the theme and content of the proposal for the dissertation/thesis, the curriculum vitae and professional projects of the candidates. The interview will be evaluated and ranked in a scale ranging from zero to ten. The interview may be face-to-face or via internet on a date specified in the timetable.

7. ACCEPTANCE OF CANDIDATES

The Selection Committee will rate the specific items and then will give an average point score in order to rank the applicant. The applicant with an average of 7.0 (seven) or above will be selected. The final approval of candidates will be done based on the final point score, and depending on the availability of supervisors in the research area of the applicant.

8. RESULTS

The list with names of the foreign candidates approved in the selection process for the Masters in Community Health and PhD in Public Health will be published on the institution's website (www.isc.ufba.br), according to the timetable for the selective process for foreign candidates. The candidates will also receive mail from the institution, informing that the results are available on the website.

9. ENROLMENT OF APPROVED CANDIDATES

The following supporting documents must be presented (both original and copies), in order for the approved candidates to register in the course: passport; CPF; 1 3x4 centimetres photograph (current and in colour); undergraduate degree certificate or a master's certificate (for the PhD candidates); transcript of the undergraduate course or the master's course (for PhD candidates); receipt of the enrolment fee. The copies of these documents will be filed by the institution.

Note: the undergraduate degree certificate, master's certificate and transcripts must be presented along with an official translation. For countries that are not signatories to the Hague Apostille Convention, the documents must be authenticated by a Brazilian consular authority in the country that issued them or apostille granted by the consular authority of the country issuing the document.

When the candidate applies for the selective process, he or she accepts the selection norms here presented as well as the Statute in the Post-Graduation Program in Collective Health at the Institute of Collective Health (ISC-UFBA). Available at:
